Russia

Every time -
Quality first

Hope to see you soon!

In 1963, Valentina Vladimirovna Tereshkova became the first woman in space – for three days she orbited the earth in the space capsule “Vostok 6.” With a great view of the earth. The same year, upon invitation by the chambers of commerce, the Messe Düsseldorf organization had its first contacts with Russian partners with great prospects for a commitment that would prove successful in the future. In the years that followed, Messe Düsseldorf consistently expanded its position as an international trade fair organizer.

Russia is now one of the most attractive markets in the world. Russia’s economic development is characterized by consistently high growth rates, an upswing that has continued uninterrupted since 1999. Thanks to growing incomes, the propensity to consume among Russians is increasing steadily.

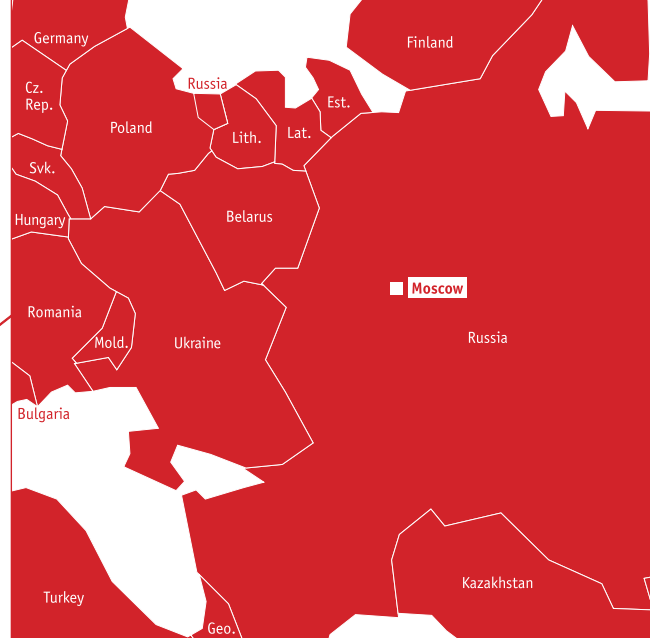

Further decisive factors in market growth are the massive investments being made: Russian companies in all sectors of industry, services and commerce as well as state institutions have a high need for modernization and therefore are strong drivers of economic momentum. These factors make Russia a growth market with limitless potential, where both Russian and international providers are benefiting from increasing domestic demand.

Naturally, this development also has a positive effect on the market for trade fairs in Russia. In this way, events develop into professional platforms for communication and trade at which companies can sound out new markets and make new contacts.

Over the past 40 years, the Messe Düsseldorf Group has developed into one of the most successful trade fair companies in Russia. In 1963 we were the first foreign trade fair company which, at the invitation of the chamber of commerce in Moscow, went ahead and opened a permanent representative office there in 1979. Profound knowledge of the market, many years of cooperation with local partners, and a committed team of qualified personnel are the cornerstones of our good reputation in the Russian economy – for companies from the whole world, that expertise is now smoothing the way into Russian markets. We have seized our opportunity and amassed our experience – now it is up to you! When will we be able to welcome you in Moscow?

Warmest regards,

Norbert Schmidt
Managing Director, Messe Düsseldorf Moscow OOO

One-eighth of the World.

A trip on the Trans-Siberian Railway takes a good six days and stretches 9,288 kilometers from Moscow to Vladivostok – through seven of 11 time zones. These figures give just a small impression of the size of the country, which covers about one-eighth of the land surface of the earth. About 20 million visitors each year discover the culture of old Russian cities or the incredible vastness of the country.

High Proof. In recent years, the business location Russia has become an increasingly interesting market for foreign companies. 143 million people now live in the Russian Federation and are doing their part to contribute to the steady economic growth of the country. For instance, in the year 2005, the private consumption of consumer goods rose by 11% over the previous year. The per capita income of the Russian population has more than doubled since 2001.

An essential aspect of the economic development of Russia is the country's wealth of mineral resources and energy reserves. Today, the engines of growth are industrial production, with growth rates of over 7% (2004), and the processing industry.

East-West Crossroads. The trade fair location Moscow gives the Messe Düsseldorf Group one of the most important routes of access to the growth-intensive markets of Eastern Europe. Viewed from a global perspective, the two European locations Düsseldorf and Moscow constitute the crossroads between East and West, Europe and Asia. Thus, for companies wanting to open up new future markets in the East, Moscow becomes the marketplace of opportunity.

The Competency Connection. Back in February 2001, the Russia Center of Competence in Düsseldorf was opened by the city of Düsseldorf, Messe Düsseldorf, and the Association of German Businesses in the Russian Federation. As part of a public-private partnership, the three partners pooled their business-related Russia activities to the benefit of Russian and German companies. They offer information and consultation to mid-size companies that want to become active in the Russian market. Furthermore, they provide support to Russian companies interested in business contacts with Germany.

Düsseldorf Economic Excursion. Each year more and more German business people take a trip to a successful future – with the economic delegation. The participants in this cross-sector business trip can get a first-hand impression in Russia of the current economic and political situation there. The compact and informative program offers visitors and hosts a unique opportunity for making direct business contacts and expanding existing business relationships.

Moscow skyline

Go East: Destination Moscow.

Europe's most populous city is not only the political and cultural center of the Russian Federation, Moscow is also the most important economic center in Russia and offers optimal opportunities for business contacts – about 400,000 companies are located there, and most of the foreign companies also have their sites there as well.

Moscow alone is responsible for 12.5% of the gross domestic product of the country. About one-fourth of the industrial production of Moscow is in the mechanical engineering sector.

About 80% of the financial potential of the country is concentrated in Moscow; two-thirds of all foreign investments in Russia's economy flow directly into the capital city. Moscow is thus the largest area of activity for foreign investors.

The Krasnaya Presnya Fairgrounds in Figures:

Overall area of the fairgrounds: 200,000 m²

Fair halls: 9

Exhibition space in the halls: 70,000 m²

Open air exhibition space: 35,000 m²

To put it simply: If you want to succeed in Eastern Europe, there is no getting around Moscow.

Important trading partners

A wealth of opportunity is rising in the East.

Highly concentrated. In recent years Russia has become an increasingly interesting market for foreign companies as an economic center. 143 million people now live in the Russian Federation and contribute to the steady economic growth of the country. The per capita income of the Russian population has more than doubled since 2001. The economic upswing in Russia promises lasting successful operations for both investors and companies. EU companies now already deploy more than half of their international business contacts in Russia, the most important trading partner of the country for imports is Germany which accounts for 13 percent.

Engine of Economic Growth: Modernization. Russia's wealth of minerals and energy reserves accounts for a substantial part of the economic growth of the country. Current powerhouses of growth are industrial production with annual growth rates of over 7 percent (2004) and the processing industry.

The need for modernization of Russian economy creates consistently high demand in the capital goods sector. Growing raw material production, the industry branches of metals, chemicals, and food production, as well as the booming construction industry invest in modern equipment and plants. It is precisely this situation that offers specialist mid-market companies from Germany and the EU optimum opportunities to tap new sales markets.

Thirsty for New Products. Russia's economic growth of course fuels people's ability and willingness to consume. As incomes increase so does the demand for consumer goods. Thus private consumption alone increased in 2005 by 11 percent against the previous year. Retail industry in Russia is currently increasing its revenues every year by more than 10 percent. This means market opportunities not only for manufacturers of consumer goods but also for companies which create the infrastructure for commerce and industry, i.e. construction providers, shop fitters, and interior designers.

Continental Connections. Did you know that Moscow was the top destination for business flights in Eastern Europe in 2003? More than 30 flights from Düsseldorf alone make the more than 2,000 air kilometers between Germany and Moscow a short trip to the economic metropolis of Eastern Europe.

Naturally, that also facilitates the traditionally good German-Russian trade contacts. Each year, Russia imports investment goods and products for private consumption valued at 12 billion euros. That makes the Federal Republic of Germany by far the most important trading partner of the Russian Federation.

Things in Common.

What do Messe Düsseldorf and Moscow have in common? It starts with the location of the trade fair sites: At the Düsseldorf site, you can enjoy a view of the Rhine; in Moscow the Moskva flows directly past the trade fair halls of the city. But the importance of the locations is also comparable. In fact, the Krasnaya Presnya site is leader in the Russian Federation in every regard: with 70,000 m² of hall space and 35,000 m² of open exhibition space, it is one of the largest fairground facility in Russia.

Trade Fairs grow too. No wonder that the country's most important trade fairs take place there: More than 80 international events are on the schedule. Since about 85% of all exhibitions in Russian are dealer shows, about three-fourths of the approximately two million annual visitors are dealers.

According to information provided by m+a Expodata, 762 trade fairs and exhibitions took place in 2005 Russia-wide. Particularly promising for exhibiting companies is the fact that 38 specialist trade fairs now bear the quality seal of the international fair association UFI – a clear sign of high-quality events. Thus specialist and mainstream fairs form an ideal springboard in the Russian market for export-oriented companies.

KONSUMEXPO

KONSUMEXPO

We're moving things here.

The long-standing good relationships between Germany and Russia are reflected in trade fair activities: 25 top events are organized by German trade fair companies. Düsseldorf Fair alone takes charge of the organization of 14 of the 22 trade fairs held in Moscow.

For companies which see the Russian trade fair market in its new role, these specialist events offer the perfect settings for establishing new business contacts. Moscow is bound to play a key role as bridge between the Western European industrial nations and the boom regions of the Asian-Pacific region.

For the producers of consumer goods, Moscow is, of course, as trade fair center of the country, the business platform for the whole Russian market. The fashion fairs CPM serve as a perfect example for companies wishing to establish themselves in the new markets. The model fair concept of the Messe Düsseldorf Group created with this event the leading fashion show in Russia – the fashion trends are made for consumers in the capital.

Networkers.

When the 30 employees of Messe Düsseldorf Moscow begin their workday, the colleagues in Singapore are already on their lunch break enjoying the sunshine. So we make efficient use of our time: First we call Düsseldorf and reserve guest tickets. And call Shanghai to reserve hotel rooms for customers. Over there the network is working at top speed right now.

Optimal service is one of our most important goals in daily business in Moscow – and as a partner for Russian customers, the team has their hands full. Domestic companies appreciate the intensive consulting provided by the Moscow specialists in advance of their participation in a trade fair. And they utilize the network of the Messe Düsseldorf Group: 13 subsidiaries and 65 foreign branch offices in 107 countries worldwide open doors to new markets, new partners, and promising new business opportunities.

455. And us.

Teamwork. The Messe Düsseldorf location on the Moskva River is a perfect location for holding high-quality events. There a professional team works to create added value for exhibitors and visitors. Analysts and market researchers monitor the domestic markets intensively. Marketing and PR experts provide publicity. Trade fair specialists in the areas of technology and organization guarantee that everything goes smoothly at the events. Thanks in no small measure to the head start of 40 years of experience in the Russian trade fair market, customers profit from the industry knowledge, competency, and commitment of the employees of the Messe Düsseldorf Group.

Division of labor. In the international network of the corporate group, there is a clearly defined division of labor for Messe Düsseldorf Moscow. In Düsseldorf, new events are conceived and developed; they are also responsible for organization and sales. While the teams in Düsseldorf – with support from our offices in 107 countries – take care of the international exhibitors, the colleagues in Moscow concentrate on acquisition of and support for Russian companies or international joint venture companies located in Russia, along with advertising for visitors.

In the implementation phase of a trade fair in Moscow, employees of the subsidiary receive support from the responsible project teams in Düsseldorf. Networked cooperation across all borders – with the goal of ensuring optimal support for our exhibiting customers at all times.

Fair organizers have to dress warmly in Moscow – not only in winter because of the frosty temperatures. More than 400 competitors are active in the trade fair market and hold about 2,000 events annually in the Russian Federation – a reflection of the country's economic growth.

Welcome to Europe's Largest City.

Moscow is growing. Since Messe Düsseldorf made its first contacts in the Russian capital in 1963, the population has more than doubled from something over 5 million then to 10.3 million today. No one has described the attraction that Moscow has for the people of the country better than Leo Tolstoy: "Every Russian feels, when he looks at Moscow, that she is his mother."

Beautiful Squares in Moscow. Anyone visiting Moscow sooner or later lands in Red Square. Of course, the square was not always red; until the 19th century the Kremlin wall was actually painted white. The name of the square comes from the 16th century and is derived from the Old Russian "Krasnaja Ploschtschad," which means something like "Beautiful Square." And "Red Square" is a perfect place to start exploring historical Moscow. Or for an excursion to one of the 100 parks in the capital – for instance, the most famous one of all, the "Gorki Park for Culture and Recreation." After a strenuous day at the fair, it's a great way to relax.

Moscow City. On one hand history, right next door the future of the booming city: Moscow City. Located seven kilometers from the Kremlin is the currently largest construction site in Europe. The economic upturn has resulted in a gigantic demand for office and administrative buildings, which will be met in the future through impressive new structures. Among other things, the tallest office building in Europe – 360 meters. Completion of the entire complex is planned for the year 2012. By then, about twelve billion US dollars will have been invested in modern infrastructure.

All Roads Lead to... Moscow. At least this revised saying applies to the Russian Federation. Whichever mode of transportation you use – Moscow's central location has made it the most important transportation hub in Russia. All the railroad connections in the country converge here, and the six most important long-distance railroad stations in the city are connected by a circular subway line. Three airports are served by international airlines. If you have time for a long boating excursion, you can reach five seas from Moscow via the country's canal system.

More important for exhibitors and visitors are the transportation systems within the city. The transportation companies move 16–20 million people each day. About half of them on the subway, or "Metro." This is certainly due to the short waiting times – at rush hour a train comes every 90 seconds.

Moscow: As an international trade fair location, it is well prepared for guests. With about 20 events each year, Messe Düsseldorf Moscow gives exhibitors and visiting dealers a chance to discover the country, the city, and new opportunities.
